

Keynote Speaker, Communication Strategist
SUCCESS Top 125 Leaders to Know
Exactly What to Say® Licensed Trainer

Renee Funk helps leaders and sales professionals communicate with clarity, curiosity, and presence. Today, Renee is hired by leadership teams, organizations, and sales professionals seeking to elevate communication, strengthen trust, and create more intentional conversations in moments that matter most.

Renee's work is built on decades of real-world business leadership. As Co-Founder of The Funk Collection, she helped build a respected relationship-driven real estate organization rooted in community & customer service.

Building and sustaining a legacy business required far more than sales skill. It demanded the ability to navigate high-stakes conversations during critical moments and life transitions where communication directly impacts trust, outcomes, and relationships.

At the core of Renee's approach is a foundation in customer service. Long before real estate, she learned that how people feel in an interaction matters just as much as the outcome itself. Presence, curiosity, empathy, and respect for the human experience are not optional. They are the standard. Those principles became a defining differentiator in the business she helped build and remain central to every keynote and training she delivers today.

As an Exactly What to Say® Licensed Trainer since 2023, Renee teaches communication frameworks focused on earning trust, strengthening relationships, and moving beyond robotic scripting. Her work helps professionals ask better questions, improve listening, create clarity, and lead more intentional conversations.
